

SAULS MOUND

Sauls Mound is 72 feet tall and is the largest Middle Woodland mound in the United States.

Sauls Mound got its name from a previous owner of the land, who was a member of the Sauls family. It is located just west of Phoenix Mountain. One reason why it is a part of the Phoenix Mountain State Nature Preserve is because it is a very important historical site. It is also a very important ecological site. It is a very important ecological site because it is a habitat for many different types of plants and animals. It may be difficult to find some of these plants and animals because they are very rare.
